Pooch misses lifelong pal!

Dog keeps vigil at site of child's death — for 6 YEARS!

TRAGIC AS Fredo plunged into a 260-foot-deep well.

She's there day after day, waiting for Alfredo to return

By MICKEY McGUIRE
Reporter for The Weekly World News

Every day for the past six years, a scruffy mongrel has sat by a village well near Rome — guarding the place where her beloved young friend Alfredo Rampi plunged to his death!

The sad-eyed pooch has kept her silent vigil in fair weather or foul since that tragic day in 1985, when 6-year-old Alfredo toppled into the 260-foot-deep well in Frascino, Italy.

Miraculously, the youngster landed on a narrow stone ledge 140 feet from the bottom.

Pulce (her name is the Italian word for flea) saw her friend fall into the well and it was her constant barking and whimpering that alerted villagers to Alfredo's terrible plight. Millions of television viewers around the world prayed for little Alfredo as they watched the heroic 48-hour effort to rescue him.

But the prayers and heroics were in vain.

When the boy's broken body was finally hauled to the surface he was dead.

Pulce, standing quiet and apart from the crowd of spectators, was at the well when her friend's lifeless body was removed.

Ever since, the mutt, who is the only witness to Alfredo's life, has been his constant guardian in death.

She sits atop the manhole as calm, gazing up at a crucifix and photograph of her dead friend, pining for him to come back and play with her.

"It's heartbreaking to see her there, day after day, waiting for the boy to return," said shepherdess Marie Campo. "Sometimes I will give her food and water and she seems grateful.

"But she won't allow me to pet her. If little children try to climb onto the well, she runs to them and keeps them away. She remembers too well what happened to little Alfredo."

The pooch's owners are Rosilla and Angelo Salemi, but they are the first to admit that she really was — and still is — Alfredo's dog. "They were always together when Alfredo was alive," Mrs. Salemi said.

"And even though he's been dead for six years, that hasn't changed. Pulce knows she still belongs to Alfredo.

"The dog comes home in the evening and stays with us. But with the first light of dawn, she is on her way back to the well to be with Alfredo."

That's the way it has been all these years that he's been dead. And that's the way it will be until the day Pulce dies. Then they will be together again.

A feisty 78-year-old American millionaire has offered $500,000 to any sexy young woman under 30 who will bear him a child.

"This is a straight business deal for an attractive cutie with a nice figure and personality who is willing to spend whatever time it takes to give me the heir I've always dreamed of," said Angus Williamson.

"Despite my advanced age, there's still a lot of fire in this old furnace so anyone who accepts my half-a-million-dollar offer will find out."

The feisty old codger wants a woman, with the face of an American and know how to have fun.

"I drive an American car, eat American food and wear clothes made in the good old U.S. I don't want any foreigners in my bed."

The lucky woman who wins Angus' heart will live a life of luxury with yearly trips to Vegas, the Mardi Gras in New Orleans and a romp on the French Riviera.

Honor student killed girl, 8, because he was bored, say cops

KILLING Margaret was like "fulfilling a fantasy," suspect John Jolley allegedly told police.

A one-time high school whiz kid molested and murdered an 8-year-old girl he didn't even know simply because the idea intrigued him — and he was bored, cops said.

Killing a total stranger was like "fulfilling a fantasy" to John Jolley, 20, according to detectives who arrested him in the death of second-grader Margaret Marquez.

"The basic reason was boredom — the whole thing was based around sexuality. Basically it was a web waiting for a fly," cops quoted Jolley as saying.

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Jolley, a former high school honor student, was assembling furniture in the basement of a Minneapolis store where the victim was shopping with her mother.

The pretty youngster had no way of knowing that Jolley had been looking for someone to kill for about a month, police said.

"He admitted the thought of killing someone intrigued him intellectually," said Detective Richard Merrill.

Jolley planned to lure a young girl to the store's basement and even had a rubber stuffed dummy stashed there to knock her unconscious, according to cops.

The unsuspecting child walked into a death trap when she used the basement bathroom.

PRETTY Margaret Marquez was knocked unconscious with a rubber mallet, sexually molested and then drowned in a bathtub.

Jolley, who once dressed as the Grim Reaper for a high school yearbook photo, knocked the girl unconscious, put her in a box and carried her to his car, cops said.

While police and the child's frantic parents scoured the city for her, Jolley held Margaret captive in the basement of his parents' home and at his brother's house.

"Jolley has admitted forcing the girl in a shower and later as they sat in a bathtub just before he pushed her head under the water and drowned her," said a police detective. The girl's body was later found stuffed in a plastic bag near a highway.

Investigators eventually questioned Jolley, who cops said later led them to the roadside spot where he had dumped Margaret's body.

"I did it, she's dead. I killed her. I drowned her," police said Jolley confessed.

Margaret's teacher described her as a "feisty and cheerful child who smiled a lot."

Jolley has been indicted by a grand jury on a first-degree murder charge.

A judge has ordered Jolley to undergo a mental examination.

LOTTERY GOOF SPARKS HEART ATTACK!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Being told he won a $12 million lottery and later learning it was a horrible mistake was more than Woody Nelson's old heart could stand — and he dropped dead the next day.

"Hearing that you have become a millionaire one day and then seeing your dreams shattered the next day has got to take its toll on a person," said a lottery spokesman.

"No one can say for sure the bad lottery news brought on the heart attack, but we are extremely sorry it happened," she added.

The tragic chain of events began when Nelson, 75, and his wife went to a grocery in Watertown, S.D., and checked the winning lottery numbers against their tickets.

To their sheer and amazement, the hardscrabble old couple had the winning numbers — 17, 34, 42, 45, 50 and 04.

For the moment they were millionaires. They went to two other locations to double-check. The same numbers were posted.

And then it happened. Lottery bigwigs announced the wrong set of numbers had been sent to stores.

"A lottery employee in Pierre had mistakenly entered the number 34 instead of 33 into the computer.

"Unfortunately, we did not discover the mistake until it was too late," said the lottery spokesman.

The deliriously happy couple were walking on clouds until a grocery clerk told them a few hours later that the wrong winning numbers had been posted.

Instead of winning $12 million, the wrinkled old potato picker had won $2,000 for having 5 of 6 winning numbers.

Nelson went to work as usual the next day at the Watertown Potato Co. He collapsed while climbing on a trailer to help with the fall potato harvest.

Potato farmer thought he'd won $12 million — he was wrong!

I WAS SAVED BY A GHOST SHIP!

SAILOR Chiu Ching-tseng was looking death in the face.

The incredible story of a sailor who was washed overboard!

Radio South Africa

A sailor who fell off a tramp steamer in the middle of the Atlantic says he was rescued by the ghostly crew of an old clipper ship that didn't even exist!

"I'm very grateful to be alive but I couldn't tell you why or how in a million years," sailor Chiu Ching-tseng, 54, said in a broadcast from Cape Town, South Africa.

"All I know is that I fell off my own ship and was taken aboard a clipper ship that had no more substance than a cloud and sailed under a wind that you couldn't even feel.

"I don't know what else to say except that I'm alive and that's all there is to it."

Marine authorities in Cape Town confirmed that Chiu was reported missing from a Dutch steamer on a trip from Brazil to South Africa.

Nine days later, they added, he was picked up by a German freighter that found him treading water four miles west of Cape Town port.

"What happened in between is anybody's guess," said medical officers who examined him. "The only thing we can say is that he could have survived for nine days on the open sea without food, water or any kind of flotation.

"The mystery of it is that he did."

Chiu said his ordeal began when he was washed over the side of the steamer during a storm around midnight, June 13. After struggling to keep his head above water for what seemed like hours, he was hauled aboard a strange wooden ship that sailed out of a bank of fog, he said.

"The men who pulled me out of the water moved like they were in a dream and didn't say a word to me. They were dressed in clothes of another century and their ship had no engines. I could see the man at the helm and never did more than nod when he communicated with his own. I was taken to a cabin and given food and beer.

"Everything was so unreal I couldn't really be sure what was happening until the ship vanished right out from under me and I was in the water — within hailing distance of the German freighter."

Parapsychologist Dr. John Childs spoke with Chiu about the alleged incident and said: "It's quite possible that what this sailor says is true. Ghost ships appear on the high seas more often than we think."

Barkeep O'Hagarty

Befuddled bar owner's gripe:

Beer-guzzling leprechauns are drinking me dry!

By LAUREL BOWIE/Correspondent

Flustered pub owner Eamon O'Hagarty says his once-booming business is being drained dry — by beer-guzzling leprechauns!

The gnat-size sots raid his roadhouse so regularly that swaggering Eamon has started leaving mugs of brew out every night to keep the thirsty thieves from toying with his beer taps, he said.

"I used to think leprechauns were a harmless old legend and nothing more," the ruddy Irishman told reporters in Dublin.

"But when they start taking money out of your pocket, you've got to believe."

The barkeep's bizarre predicament came to light one morning last spring when he got to work and found every tap in the tavern bone dry.

"I thought some children or maybe some common crooks had broken in for a party, but the police could find no signs of forced entry," said the flabbergasted father of six.

"I was ready to forget the whole thing, but they just kept coming, night after night. Three several people — including some who never hit a shot — told me they'd passed my place and seen leprechauns tossing down my beer.

"I know it sounds crazy, but I also know they're right. It's the only explanation."

After putting up with the knee-high revelers' nocturnal shenanigans for months, the tick-off-at tavern owner spent a night in the pub with a softball bat by his side, hoping to scare the little vittlers and lay down the law.

"But I dozed off and when I woke up, every drop in the house was gone," he said. By then, Eamon was so short-up he asked a priest to exorcise the tiny tipplers.

"He tried, but even the Father couldn't stop them," said the peeved pourmaster. "I guess you can't exorcise a leprechaun. So now I just leave a dozen pints out in hopes they'll drink those and leave my taps alone. Sometimes they do, sometimes they don't. And sometimes they don't show at all. Maybe even leprechauns get an occasional hangover."

Demon computer kills 2 workers!

Exorcist called in after experts discover virus-bred evil spirit!

By SALLY O'DAY
Special to The Weekly World News

Bank officials have summoned an exorcist to rid a computer terminal of a hideous horned demon that's already killed two employees and put another in a coma!

And if Father Hector Diaz fails in his mission to banish the spirit, authorities say they'll have to shut down the bank because the computer can't be turned off, moved or unplugged. And as long as it remains in place, every customer and employee is in danger.

"This sounds like something out of a sci-fi movie but the threat is both serious and real," Police Detective Raul Lopez told reporters.

"I don't know why and I don't know how. But an evil force or spirit is living in that machine and the death of two innocent people proves it.

"Maria Catalan was found sitting at the terminal with her head in her lap. Carmen de la Fuente had a fatal heart attack within two minutes of sitting down to work.

"Computer experts tried to examine the terminal but they had no success whatsoever. One of them started babbling and 6 others were flung to the floor like rag dolls by some unseen force.

"We can't turn the machine off because everyone who tries blacks out and falls to the floor. I know I must sound like a lunatic, but that computer truly has a mind — and a life — of its own."

The mind-numbing drama began when the bank in Valparaiso, Chile, installed a new computer system last spring. Within days the system turned deadly.

When a bank custodian told of seeing a hideous horned demon appear on the computer screen, bank officials asked Father Diaz to perform an exorcism.

The priest has been unavailable for comment while he prepares to perform the rite of exorcism.

But a spokesman for the firm that installed the computer system says that a computer virus may be responsible.

CLAUDE JACCARD

Man hasn't slept a wink in 9 years!

A 48-year-old man is so terrified of sleep that he has kept himself awake for the past nine years, Swiss newspapers report.

Claude Jaccard told reporters in Geneva that he last slept the night of Sept. 14, 1982, and hasn't had as much as a catnap since.

Sleep researchers have shown a keen interest in the case, calling Jaccard one of a handful of humans who has been able to conquer the body's need for sleep.

"He doesn't sleep at all, he doesn't take a nap, he doesn't meditate, he doesn't rest but he still has plenty of pep," said Dr. Alain Kiefer, who specializes in the treatment of sleep abnormalities.

According to Dr. Kiefer, Jaccard said he was a normal sleeper until he reached the age of 39.

At that time, he began to feel like his soul left his body whenever he dozed.

"That's why I am afraid to go to sleep. It seems like my life is at stake," Jaccard said.

Dr. Kiefer has studied the sleepless man since April but hasn't found a clue as to how he can stay awake continuously.

"It's possible that Mr. Jaccard's fear is so great that his subconscious mind has found a way to turn the negative energy of fatigue into a positive energy that keeps him awake."

Maryland woman's shocking confession . . .

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE CURED MY NYMPHOMANIA!

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Correspondent

"I was a nymphomaniac, but I'm not anymore — thanks to a loving man who saved me from my torment."

That's the shocking confession of Cissy Stevens, a courageous woman who was inspired by the plight of Florida sex addict Kathy Willets to come forward and tell her story.

Kathy, who was charged by police in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., with operating a prostitution business from her home, has claimed that it was nymphomania that drove her to have as many as eight lovers a day.

Skeptical authorities say she was getting $100 a pop for the love sessions, but Kathy says it wasn't money but a desperate lust that drove her — and Cissy believes her.

"I, too, have been tormented by a need for sex, a need so fierce that I would approach total strangers and beg them to make love to me," says Cissy, 28, a Baltimore woman who has changed her and her husband's names for the purposes of this article. "I couldn't help myself, even though my terrible drive for love made me feel cheap and dirty.

"WITH Jim I am fulfilled at last," says Cissy.

'I was tormented by a need for sex — until I met Jim'

"It was only when I quit my loving frustrated that I got the help I needed.

"Now I want to tell Kathy and other women like her: Don't give up hope. You can be helped."

Cissy says her insatiable appetite for sex began when at just 12 years old she lost her virginity. Her first lover, a man of 25, dropped her after the encounter — and started her off on an endless search for a fulfilling love.

"I went from date to date from then on," Cissy says. "I was so hungry for love that even an hour or two after having sex I was looking for another lover. Pretty soon I lost all self-respect in my endless quest to fill the emptiness I felt.

"I made love to a cop who pulled me over for speeding.

"I would take on anyone, anytime I wanted to stop it, but I couldn't."

Cissy's terrible torment came to an end in 1980 when she met her loving husband Jim, a chiropractor. During a visit to his office, she confessed to him that she was a sex addict and he helped her find treatment for her mental turmoil.

Months later the pair fell in love and married and they now have an adorable son.

"Now that I have Jim and the baby I am fulfilled at last," Cissy said.

"I have learned to love one man body and soul instead of loving many men only with my

As if she didn't suffer enough with brain surgery...

Bungling doc leaves brave little Abby with only one hand!

By DICK DONOVAN

Twice in her young life, 3-year-old Abigail Cole has had to be brave. Once was when she underwent brain surgery. The second time was when her doctor made a stupid blunder — that left her with only one hand!

Now her heartbroken dad and little parents are determined to make the hospital and the bungling doctor pay dearly for the tragedy that will be little Abby's cross to bear for the rest of her life.

My beautiful little baby will suffer the results of that dreadful mistake as long as she lives," said her anguished ex-nurse mum Dawn. "She's been a real trooper but she's facing a different battle now.

The brain blunder was made following her five-hour operation to remove a cyst from her brain.

Her frantic parents had just been told the surgery was a success.

But as the bandages were removed in the recovery room at Addenbrooke's Hospital in Cambridge, Dawn noticed a splint on little Abby's right hand.

But instead of explaining a doctor had put the needle in an artery. The drug couldn't circulate through her hand and it quickly started to die.

discovered. It was too late. Her hand had to be amputated!

Hospital officials described the incident as a tragic mistake and said the doctor won't be made to face disciplinary action.

But Dawn and Gordon Cole are determined to make the hospital pay for little Abby's maiming loss.

"What happened to her has devastated us all.

"She survived a delicate five-hour brain operation only to wake up and find her right hand missing. It's too horrible to imagine.

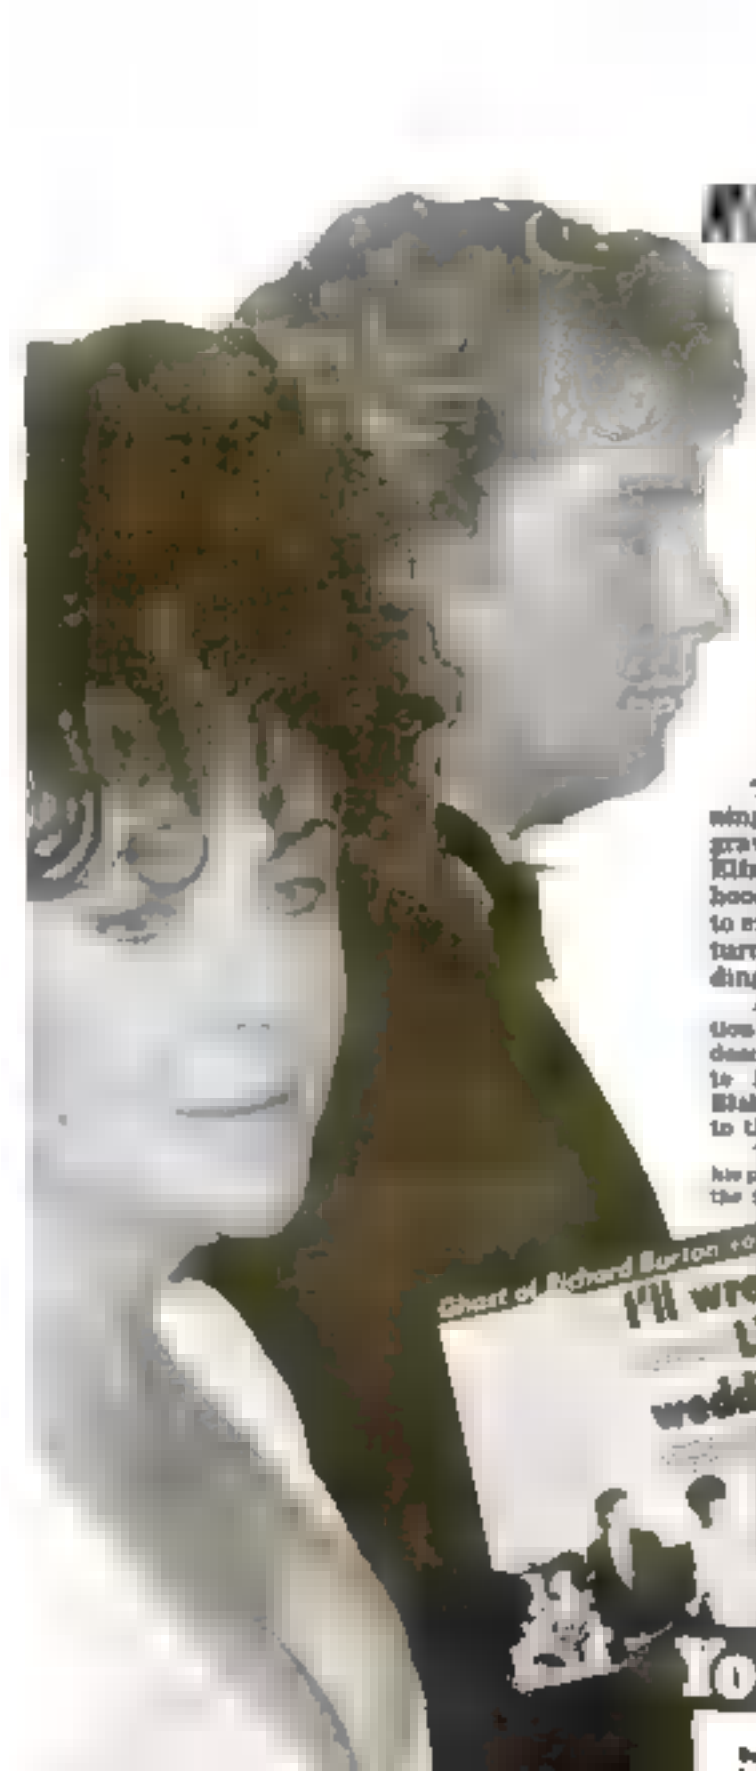
Richard Burton's ghost brags:

I GAVE LIZ A WEDDING FROM HELL!



True to his word, and in a stunning stroke from beyond the grave, Richard Burton wrecked Elizabeth Taylor's much ballyhooed "marriage of the century" to ex-jailbird Larry Fortensky and turned the party into "the wedding from hell."

As reported in the October 8 edition of The Weekly World News, the dead Welsh hell-raiser's ghost spoke to famed Hollywood psychic Bill Blake about his ex-wife's eighth trip to the altar.

"He said he would do everything in his power to throw a monkey wrench into the festivities," Blake said the morning after the wedding.

And did he ever! Here's just a partial list of the foul-ups:

● One hour before Liz and Larry tied the knot, the kitchen at Richard Burton's ten-like ranch lost all power. The $3,500, five-tier "Chocolate Fudge Surprise" wedding cake began to melt.

● The no-shows included Frank Sinatra, Madonna, Eddie Murphy, Liza Minnelli and ex-Presidents Ford and Reagan — all old pals of the bride.

● Security guards were astounded to find the nuptial garden electronically bugged. "That was the ultimate nightmare," said a security man. "We swept the garden clean, but everyone was thinking, What else is bugged?"

● The menu of 17 gourmet delicacies

BOOBACIOUS Brigitte Bardot is still a hot item — decades later!

Roy Rogers is back in the saddle — at age 79!

King of the cowboys Roy Rogers is finally out his hotch after a bout with pneumonia and a heart operation when he got a little help from his friends. Country superstars Willie Nelson, Randy Travis, Clint Black and the Oak Ridge Boys helped the 79-year-old prairie crooner back in the saddle by singing along with him in a new, nostalgia-filled album, Tribute.

"The pneumonia and operation almost knocked me cockeyed," said Rogers from his museum in the Chihuahua desert. But the Ohio farm boy who made 88 movies and sang in every one of them jumped at the chance to record with today's headliners.

"It was terrific," said Rogers. "It was like one big family — like the kids coming home for a family reunion. Randy and Clint and the whole bunch were just terrific. I got a kick out of working with them." Work to Rogers means singing and painting, which he does on a couple of cats.

"I've been painting all my life," said Roy. "I still find it easy to do. You have that breath in your voice or you don't."

These days Rogers rides a motorcycle, instead of his beloved horse Trigger, from home to the museum in Victorville.

Rogers bought Trigger in 1938 and had the golden mare stuffed and mounted when he hit the dust in 1965. The noble steed is the most popular attraction in THIS Mr. Rogers' neighborhood. "I make hands for an hour or two," said Rogers. "The people make some really beautiful comments to me. It makes you feel you haven't been worthless all your life.

"I'm like Popeye — I am what I am," said Rogers. "I was raised as a farm, and I still am a farm boy. And a family man." Happy trails to you and Dale, Roy boy. — Milwaukee Journal time was so deafening the guests couldn't even hear the loving couple exchange their vows.

● A wacky parachutist landed just 10 feet from Liz and Larry in the middle of the ceremony. Liz was so distraught she canceled the traditional throwing-the-bride's-bouquet.

"Did a pretty good job of wrecking havoc at this party, didn't I?" Mike said Burton told him after the fiasco.

I guess he pilly well did. A source close to the nuptials said, "Liz was furious. It was the wedding from hell!" — Special to The Weekly World News

The Colonel must be twirling in his grave!

Far-out farmer raises chickens with six legs!

Here's yummy news for fried chicken lovers everywhere — a farmer in France is producing a strain of super-birds with four wings and six legs!

But even if you're not a dark meat fan, cheer up. Because of the added wings and legs, the wonderchicks also sprout plumper breasts than those found on the old-fashioned birds now raised in America.

Mouth-watering wonderbirds are drumstick-lover's dream

The new wonderchicks were developed after years of private research by retired genetic scientist Pierre Mariman who maintains a vast poultry breeding farm in Normandy.

"My superior chickens will have a tremendous impact on fast-food outlets all over the world, especially in America," the 70-year-old proud declared.

"Their profits will triple because raising one super bird is no cheaper than raising three of the ordinary kind.

"And the people who buy their chickens at poultry stores or supermarkets are to be envied as well.

"Ah how do you say it — the backyard barbecue! They can have a feast for a fraction of the cost they now must pay." Mariman has quietly contacted several poultry wholesalers in carefully selected areas of America to alert them of his incredible breeding achievement. The response, he said, is overwhelming.

"I've been besieged with advance orders from every wholesaler I contacted," he added. "It will take months just to increase our production to meet the flood of orders I received in a matter of days.

"I've even been offered millions of dollars by a major American franchiser of take-out fried chicken that wants exclusive rights to the genetic formula that produces my incredible little feathered freaks.

"Imagine being able to advertise four plump chicken wings and six meaty legs, fried brown and crispy, all from a single supermarket. It would make millions of dollars. The only problem we've encountered is catching them. With six legs churning all at the same time the little devils can really move along."

But the kindly old scientist said he's "deeply troubled" about the starvation rate in impoverished countries, especially those in Africa. He believes his super-chickens can help wipe out world hunger.

"I am thinking perhaps I will give my secret to the world for a token payment of $25 million in gold," he explained.

But even Mariman doesn't argue that he thinks five million isn't what you would call chicken feed.

Health nut vows to drink a creek — and dies trying!

Water-crazy takeover Nigel Smith died as he knelt beside a gurgling stream — in a crazy attempt to drink it dry!

"The chap gulped down as much water his body couldn't take it and he died of shock," said a policeman who investigated the bizarre incident.

"He told a witness he could drink every single drop from that brook — but obviously he didn't make it."

Friends in Devizes, England, said good-natured Nigel was so hooked on water that he guzzled down dozens of glasses he didn't have a huge water glass in his hand," said longtime pal Paul Davies.

"He believed that water cleansed the body and claimed the soul and if you drank enough of it you would never get sick. He was addicted to water just like some people are addicted to heroin."

Psychologists said the addiction is a rare but serious disorder that gives its victims an uncontrollable craving for water.

"I've seen it before, but this is the first time I've heard of it being fatal," one doctor said.

Co-worker Caryl Delaney said Nigel, 37, told him just hours before he died that he planned to walk to a stream near his home and drink it bone dry.

"Nigel was a nice guy but he was a little nutty and he was always talking about how much water he could drink.

"I never thought that he'd really try something so crazy."

But police say the wacky hacksaw left work that afternoon and hurried to the stream

Greedy docs want to slap price codes on their patients' wrists!

I'm madder than a doctor with an ugly nurse over a new idea to put supermarket price codes on hospital patients' wrists instead of the old-fashioned ID bracelets!

These stupid patient price codes will have information in them that will be read by one of those scanners just like down at the supermarket for crying out loud.

By snapping a hapless patient's wrist like a box of cereal, greedy doctors and hospitals could find out all kinds of personal stuff — like how much money you've got in the bank to pay for all those operations and pills they want to sell you.

Things like X-ray machines would have a price code stamped on 'em so they could read your wrist.

If your scan showed your bank account was getting dangerously low, the X-ray machine would just shut off and not take the more pictures until docs were satisfied you could pay.

Price code scanners will be placed at the doors of every operating room so patients could be checked out before a surgeon wasted his precious time cutting up people who couldn't pay the tab.

If your price code says you can't afford the surgery, the operating room doors stay

Let's face it, folks. It's a crazy day in America when sick people are put on computer balls like a pile of meat to have their price codes scanned.

And not only that of hope, going once and you whine you're in the hospital, the dang price code stays on your wrist.

That way they get to bill you one more time in the morgue in case you've reached your credit limit. If not, they can tack on a few bad-dam charges. Like $50 for the trip they patch you in for the trip to the funeral home. And if you do manage to stick it to the hospital riverboat sleaze, they keep you one more time for the final tally. But you do get a bag to carry all your bills home in. 11-year-old boy swipes mom's car — to go see his dad!

MONEY-GRUBBING doctors will not administer like those found on supermarkets to keep track of patients' accounts. Sick folks will ride on conveyor belts like sort of pork.

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff Writer

An 11-year-old boy from a broken home swiped his mom's car to visit his dad and led six cop cruisers on a wild, 20-mile chase before they could stop him.

"If I'd been able to get the car out of third gear, I would have dusted your tails," the youngster told state troopers when they pulled him out of the Ford Escort wagon.

Cops said the little boy seemed to be enjoying the ride after he pulled out of a shopping center in Everett, Wash., and headed along Interstate 5 toward Seattle.

"He hit two cars before he got out of the shopping center parking lot," said Lt. Tim Quenzer. "They sideswiped each other, but he was pretty wild."

One cruiser would get in front of the boy, another in back and a third beside him, but the determined little tyke, who wasn't identified, wouldn't stop.

"At times, it wasn't clear who was chasing who," said a trooper. "The boy would accelerate to 60 m.p.h. and then slow to 35." The slow parties ended when the youngster tried to slip the station wagon between two cruisers, but sideswiped one and crashed into a wall.

Troopers charged the boy in juvenile court with two counts of hit-and-run and one count of felony eluding police.

"I understand his parents were having marital troubles and were living apart," said Lt. Quenzer.

"He was homesick [illegible] father."

CALIFORNIA CATFIGHT! WIVES BRAWL [redacted] DEAD TYCOON'S RICHES

When wealthy Richard Jenkins dropped dead of a heart attack, his many wives crawled out of the woodwork to claim his body and his fortune — and a judge is having a heck of a time sorting out the mess.

At last count, five women say they're the widow of Jenkins, who made a habit out of marrying but apparently not divorcing.

According to news reports of court records, four of the weeping widows have marriage licenses to back up their claims. The fifth says she was Jenkins' wife, though they never married.

Their names are Pauline, Kiki, Laura, Ariana and Gail.

Pity poor Judge Tom Stevens who has to preside over the marital mess and dole out the deceased's estimated $1 million estate — because the wives aren't the only ones who want a piece of the pie. Jenkins, 88, has a few other relatives making a bid for his money.

Namely, four brothers, three sisters, three nieces, three nephews, two daughters and three sons.

According to court records, lawyer Richard Martinez labeled the tangled legal case "a barrel of monkeys."

According to court records, here is Jenkins' marital history:

In 1971, he married Kiki Jenkins. They separated in 1978 and filed for divorce, but the divorce was never completed.

In 1979, he married Pauline Jenkins, who claims Jenkins was living with her in Foster City, Calif., until his death last May 17.

Sometime in the 1980s, he married Gail Jenkins.

Ariana Jenkins also says she is Jenkins' wife, but says they were never legally married.

In 1990 he married Laura Jenkins, who claims she was living with Jenkins in Maryland, Calif., when he died.

Pauline reportedly has a handwritten will allegedly written by Jenkins that bequeaths her the Foster City home and his Oakland auto repair business and splits the rest of the estate between her and one of Jenkins' sons, Richard Jr.

Blind mother's baby switched at birth – with newborn CHIMP!

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

LAGOS, Nigeria — Blind mom Heather Hilton was leaving the hospital with her newborn son when heartless hooligans kidnapped the boy — and sent unsuspecting Heather home with a baby chimpanzee in her arms!

SCRATCH MOM: Heather Hilton fruitlessly cares for the baby chimp that hardhearted kidnappers switched with her infant son Tommy. Authorities say the shattered woman may never hold her son again.

And the shaken lady didn't discover until the next day that the babe she'd been cuddling and caring for was actually an ape.

"I thought he seemed kind of big and hairy," pathetic Heather lamented later. "But I never dreamed he was a monkey."

The bizarre story began when the hapless housewife entered the hospital to have her baby while her sister Hollie Sue was also in it.

"My sisters were running from the den to help me, but there were casualties in a flood and didn't make it in time," said heartsick Hollie.

"I wasn't too worried, though, because I've always been blind and I'm used to taking care of myself. I was so excited about becoming a mother, I just wanted to get to there and have me a son."

And just hours after she arrived at the hospital, Heather gave birth to a healthy, blue-eyed baby boy she named Sammy.

"It was the most wonderful moment of my life," recalled the British-born brunette. "At last I had the precious little child I always wanted."

But three days later, when hardhearted kidnappers took little sheep-eyed Sammy from Heather's arms moments after she left the hospital.

"I can't imagine why doctors would send a blind mother home alone with a newborn baby, but that's just what they did," said dumbfounded Police Detective Patrick Davidia.

"The poor woman was trying to get into a cab right outside the hospital when two men approached, grabbed her baby and replaced it with a baby chimpanzee.

"She was so confused, she didn't even realize a switch had been made. She thought she was holding her baby all the way home."

Heather didn't realize her mistake until she arrived at her house the next day and found her feeding a chimp with a baby bottle.

"It must have come as a terrible shock to all of them."

And Det Davidia says there is very little chance helpless Heather will ever see her little Sammy again.

"Babies taken bring a high price on the black market here, and because this baby is white, he would be even more valuable," said the somber lawman. "I'm afraid her little boy is long gone by now."

While concerned cops search for her son, troubled Heather can only wait and pray.

"I miss my baby so much I cry every day," said the worthified mom. "And that darn chimp is literally tearing my house apart."

Gator rips off camper's manhood — in an outhouse!

Steve Stetzer was using a campground outhouse when his testicles were chomped off — by a big gator!

"It was the most agonizing pain I've ever experienced," said shocked Steve. "I thought I was going to die."

Doctors were able to save the bleeding barber's life, but not his mangled manhood.

Steve's horrifying ordeal began almost immediately after he dropped his drawers and sat down on the outhouse.

"I heard a strange noise and a hiss. I had a strange feeling that I really wasn't alone.

"Suddenly, I felt an indescribable pain in my groin. I jumped off the john and looked into the hole — smack into the beady eyes of a giant hungry gator with my testicles in his jaws," Steve said.

Terrified Steve ran screaming into the house and awakened his parents, who drove him to a hospital in Lisson, Costa Rica.

"I was mumbling incoherently about the gator before I passed out from losing so much blood," he said. "When I woke up, I was in the recovery room after surgery."

Surgeons said that Steve's injuries were consistent with a gator's bite.

An inspection by wall officers the next day revealed a manhole had developed under the outhouse, which was about 100 yards from a huge drainage ditch.

"Recent rains had flooded the area," said Steve's dad. "We can only speculate that the gator somehow made his way from the ditch to the outhouse because of the sinkhole and flooded conditions," he said.

"We never found the critter but we're sure glad that he's still around."

Man breaks woman's heart — literally — with a punch to her chest!

PRETTY university coed Jessica Enright was found dead sprawled across a bed in her alleged killer's apartment

Beauty bleeds to death when organ bursts

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

Melking, 6-foot-4 Craig Goldberg killed his stunning coed girlfriend by breaking her heart — with one punch to her chest!

That's the tragic scenario cops described in charging the 210-pound teenager with first-degree murder in the death of Jessica Enright, a 20-year-old student at the University of South Florida in Tampa.

An autopsy disclosed that the petite blonde had been punched so hard in the chest that her heart was torn and she bled to death.

Jessica was found sprawled across a bed in Goldberg's apartment. Cops said a note found near her body indicated the 19-year-old Hillsborough Community College student, described as a violently jealous man, was the girl's killer.

"He wrote the note," sheriff's spokesman Jack Espenson told The Weekly World News.

"In it, he said that he had killed her and that he was going to kill himself.

"He slashed his wrists, but then he bandaged them and left Florida.

"He was arrested at the home of his parents in New City, N.Y., about three hours after the girl was found."

HANDCUFFED man in handcuffs, Craig Goldberg protested as he was escorted by shackled by

Orange juice protects you from X rays, say experts

You can protect yourself from the damaging effects of X rays by drinking a glass of orange juice right before an X-ray test, experts say.

The vitamin C in orange juice neutralizes dangerous particles given off by radiation tests and prevents damage to the body, researchers at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey have found.

The researchers' findings are especially good news for cancer patients.

He treats me like a dog — so I bit him on the leg!

Confidential

Dear Paralyzed in Los Angeles: Don't be paranoid. If I thought you were in mind I would have said so!

Dear Frustrated in Mississippi Valley: Statistics show that 88 percent of people were taking a much break when God gave out brains — and you've obviously one of them!

Dear Resistor in Malibu: With a garden hose? That would have to hurt!

Dear Intimidated in Florida: I hate to tell you this, pinhead, but I wouldn't take you in a dogfight!

Dear Troubled Teen in Maine: It's perfectly natural, kid. Ask your dad for details.

Dear Tight in Wapakoneta: At least you admit it!

Dear Dotti: My husband is a swell guy and a good provider but he has an annoying habit of humiliating me in front of his friends. He orders me to get drinks for him and light his cigarettes and generally treats me like a dog. To make a long story short I got fed up one day and hit the hell out of his leg, which is exactly what a dog would do if he treated the pooch like he treats me. My husband raised a stink about it and says I'm being childish. I maintain I did the right thing, Dotti. Do you agree? — Humiliated in New York

Dear Humiliated: Absolutely not! Instead of biting the creep you should have gotten yourself a lawyer and filed for divorce.

I'm too shy to say 'Hi' to a dear hunk

Dear Dotti: There's this really cute guy that I like but he's never said hi to me. I'm much too shy to strike up a conversation with him. How can I straighten out my case of the jitters and get his attention. Dotti? As it stands I get so tongue-tied that I don't know what to say when he comes around. — Shy in Oklahoma

Dear Shy: If the guy is half as dumb as you say he is you should be able to get his attention by passing gas! After that flop going you don't have to worry about his ever talking to you. Now get out there and do something about that boy! It's up to you!

11-year-old loves Dotti — and wants her job

Dear Dotti: I'm a longtime admirer of you and your column and was wondering if you'd tell me how you got your job as America's greatest advice columnist? I'm 11 years old and might be interested in sharing my own religious viewpoints. I would appreciate anything you can tell me. — Amanda in Illinois

Dear Amanda: I got my start at The Weekly World News by turning up the heat that my relatives roasted many residents of people and sold a few papers in the process.

I also hold advanced degrees in psychology and religious studies from prestigious and reputable universities. I think all this proves that I have the smarts, education and experience to help. Good luck to you, Amanda, in your religious endeavors. Here's hoping you'll be able to get your own column someday!

I wanted a boyfriend — but I got zits instead!

Dear Dotti: I can't get a boyfriend because I've got pimples — a LOT of pimples. I've tried every medication in the book but they don't help. What can I do? — Whitehead in Florida

Dear Whitehead: I've had pimples but I sympathize with you because I know how tough it was. And I suggest that you see a dermatologist who can straighten your skin out and tell you how best to treat it. You may have to live with blemishes for quite a few years, kiddo, and you'll definitely be better off with a clear conscience!

Dotti will answer your letters — and will be glad to do so. Just write to her, c/o Weekly World News, 600 South East Coast Ave., Lantana, Fla. 33462

Ask the Countess

Will our boss recover from his battle with a werewolf?

COUNTESS SOPHIA SARAH

offers readers personal advice based on your horoscope. Write to Countess Sarah, Weekly World News, 600 S. East Coast Ave. Lantana, Fla. 33462. Include your birth date. The Countess' advice is free. Do not send money.

Dear Countess: After reading a big magazine article entitled "How to Spot a Werewolf" my co-workers and I began to suspect that a fellow employee fit the bill and eventually decided that he did. We were really afraid to be around this guy and if it weren't for our courageous boss, who risked his own life to fire the werewolf, we might still be living in fear today. Unfortunately, our boss has since come down with a mysterious ailment and we blame the werewolf. We hope you can make him well again. — Hoping in Los Angeles

Dear Hoping: My crystal ball predicts that your boss will make a complete recovery. As for the werewolf, you can expect to see a great improvement in his health within the next few days. But I also must caution you to be extremely kind and nothing to do with the illness. Your boss did it in honorable combat and you should treat him with respect.

Dear Countess: My husband says he got out of bed to go to the bathroom the other night and when he returned he reported he had lost his body and HEAD. He says he looked down and saw his body but his head was missing. Do you think he's telling the truth? — Worried in New Jersey

Dear Worried: Your husband should thank he got separated from his body, my dear. In fact, it was all a dream!

Dear Countess: My first, middle and last name all have six letters in them which means that my initials possibly add up 666. Does this mean that I'm going to hell when I die? Or is it possible that I have some kind of unknown power? — Concerned in Colorado

Dear Concerned: After consulting my crystal ball I can assure you that your six digit name means nothing, my dear.

Dear Countess: I'm a nerd and want to quit, a spell so I can get in with the group of kids I want to get in with at school. I want to make friends with kids who are decent human beings and stay out of trouble. — Nerd in Colorado

Dear Nerd: It breaks my heart to hear a fine young man like you call himself "a nerd." I see great things in your future, and want you to start believing in yourself.

Teen steals piece of chicken from BBQ grill — at gunpoint!

Cops are looking for a teenage boy who stuck a gun in the face of a neighborhood kid — and stole a piece of barbecued chicken.

"I'll take a piece of chicken," the gunman menacingly told the kid pistol about two inches from the nose of Jermaine Henley Jermaine, 14, was quietly barbecuing chicken on the backyard grill of his parents' home in Kenosha, Mich.

Three acquaintances spotted the savory chicken and dropped by. When Jermaine refused one of the youth's request for a piece of chicken, he grabbed it off the grill anyway. But Jermaine blocked him when he reached for another piece.

That's when the chicken thief whipped out the gun, cops said.

A warrant charging armed robbery has been issued in Juvenile Court for the gunman, 13.

Cowboys watched a starship crash in 1884!

UFOs VISITED THE OLD WEST!

[illegible] automobile and the airplane had yet to be invented when a handful of stunned cowboys watched one of the most spectacular UFO crashes in history — in Dundy County, Neb.!

John Ellis and Alf Williamson were just two of the horrified cowpunchers who made shocking claims to have seen the flaming starship fall from the sky in broad daylight on June 6, 1884.

Their gripping accounts of the incident appeared in leading newspapers throughout the state.

And if those stories were accurate, the crash was actually confirmed by a team of independent investigators who inspected the wreckage.

The two cowboys told reporters that the UFO looked like a giant meteor when it first appeared in the sky on its shocking plunge to earth.

They changed their minds when the object slammed against the ground, bounced and skidded for a half a mile — leaving a trail of machinery and smoldering metal in its wake.

Ellis and Williamson said they mounted their horses and rode furiously toward the remains of the enormous, disc-shaped craft.

But they had to stop short because the ground surrounding it was white hot and bubbling like molten glass.

Ellis turned back but Williamson fearlessly inspected and stared at the superheated wreckage which ranged for hours and blistered the fire, the Sylvania Visitor and Lincoln Daily Journal said.

Understaffed investigators reportedly traveled to the site a few days later. They described the wreckage just as the cowboys had said.

Eerily, the Daily State Journal reported that the remains of the UFO "disappeared like mist" in a rainstorm.

And while nobody mentioned anything about aliens then or before the editor of the Lincoln Daily Journal spoke later that the UFO was a vessel belonging originally to another planet.

People are still arguing about the alleged crash even today. Some believe the whole thing was a hoax.

But others, like University of Nebraska folklorist Roger Welsh, aren't so sure. "It was a very long time ago," he said. "There's just no way anyone can know what took place."

OHIO WOMAN HAS A 3RD EYE — IN THE BACK OF HER HEAD!

By FRANK DI PIETRO
Enquirer Staff Writer

Bratty school kids can't pull the wool over Amy Hanson's eyes — because she has three of them and one is in the back of her head!

"I haven't had many problems with the little rug-pers since the first day when I clunked my teach and caught one smart alleck boy [illegible] me," said Amy [illegible], a kindergarten teacher at a public school outside Columbus, Ohio.

Her classroom is the most popular so parents fight and all know why," quipped Amy's principal. "The parents want to see Amy with their own eyes."

"The extra eye came in handy three weeks ago when a mugger tried to sneak up behind her in the parking lot. I spun around and zapped him with my Mace," she said. "He ran away yelping like a whipped dog. I don't know how people get along without an eye in the back of their head."

When she's behind the wheel, attractive Amy has a built-in rearview mirror to help her change lanes or park her car. They say she can easily watch TV no matter which way she is facing in bed.

"Amy is a medical oddity as can't explain," say doctors who have examined Amy's bizarre condition. "It's like people born with extra toes or missing an arm. There are some things you just can't explain."

Her vision is better in the back than in the front, where she is nearsighted. Unfortunately, her three eyes always close and open together.

"It can be very aggravating watching a movie on TV.

"Sometimes, when I'm running errands I get distracted by something behind me," she said. "So I keep my hair long. When I used to use the extra eye I part my hair in the back.

"When I was younger, kids would call me 'Three Eyes' and 'Freakus' and 'Spooky,' which is backward for that one-eyed monster named Cyclops," she said. "I got over it because I figured they were just jealous."

Amy has a boyfriend who doesn't mind that she is different. They have even talked about marriage.

"I want to have kids but I worry," she said. "I want them to be normal."

PRETTY schoolteacher Amy Hanson says that her extra eye helps her keep watch on her restless kindergartners.

'It's like having a built-in rearview mirror,' says Amy

TO SHOW our photographer her third eye Amy parted her hair. "I keep my hair long," she says. "so I don't get distracted by something behind me — unless I'm in class or someplace where I want to know what's going on around me."

Judge orders ULTIMATE revenge

[redacted] will get sex change — then he'll be RAPED!

By JOHN TRENT
Special to The Weekly World News

An eye-for-an-eye judge sentenced a rapist to undergo sex-change surgery and then be raped himself in one of the most dramatic judicial decisions ever!

And while attorneys for the crying Matin Latif begged him to reconsider, Judge Amir Usmani said "hanging is too good" for the monster who raped a screaming 16-year-old Aisi Kurin last June 21.

He also stipulated that the courtordered sex change and rape be carried out no later than December 31.

"The precise date will depend on the completion of the sex-change surgery and how quickly the vagina recovers from the operation," Judge Usmani told reporters.

"The rape itself will be conducted by one of five sex offenders now serving time in prison," he added. "And I assure you it will be brutal."

Judge Usmani handed down the controversial sentence at the conclusion of Latif's 12-day trial in Peshawar, Pakistan, on September 27.

The 36-year-old man maintained his innocence throughout the proceedings. But prosecutors produced no less than 14 witnesses who claimed to have seen the man beat and rape the beautiful teenager in broad daylight in downtown Peshawar Last January.

A jury found Latif guilty of first-degree rape and recommended life imprisonment. Judge Usmani went them one better by rendering what he called "the ultimate punishment for the most vicious human being I've encountered."

Under Pakistani law Latif didn't have the option of an appeal. In fact, he's already gotten breast implants and will undergo the most dramatic phase of his sex-change surgery on December — when he will have his male genitalia removed and replaced with a surgically reconstructed vagina.

Judge Usmani says Latif's medical team will be reviewed and evaluated and the precise date of his court-ordered rape is expected to be set at that time.

PREVERT Matin Latif will get what he deserves

BEAUTIFUL Aisi Kurin was gunned with the sentence

Legal scholars aren't happy because they feel that the sentence will set a dangerous precedent both in Pakistan and abroad.

As German law professor Otto Weiger put it, "This may be the world's first sex-change sentence but now that a precedent has been set, it certainly won't be the last.

"Before you know it we'll see this kind of punishment meeting out all

MAN COOKS FOOD — IN HIS HANDS!

These hot palms generate 600 volts, say researchers

By MICHAEL TODD

When Pablo Suarez wants to cook his lunch, he just holds it in his hands.

The 28-year-old San Juan Puerto Rican technician has developed bizarre "hot hands."

Using his hands as a heat source, he can boil water in a matter of minutes.

He has even managed to grill a cheese sandwich by holding it between his palms.

Suarez, who has been experimenting with making his hands hot since he was a teenager, claims the secret is in the power of his mind.

"I can control the heat in my hands by concentrating on my arteries," he explained.

"I can open and close the arteries in my hands at will, and this controls the amount of heat that is released."

Suarez says he began to experiment with making his hands hot when he was a teenager.

"I was fascinated by the power of the mind and wanted to see what I could do with it," he said.

"I started by trying to heat a cup of water, but soon found I could do much more than that."

Suarez says he can now boil a pint of water in less than two minutes.

"I can also grill food by holding it between my hands for a few minutes," he said.

"I have even managed to grill a cheese sandwich in this way."

Suarez says he has been approached by several companies who want to market his hot hands.

"I am considering their offers, but I am not in it for the money," he said.

"I just enjoy showing people what I can do."

fish and heating up bowls of broth and rice for himself and anyone who wishes.

It's not all fun and games, though, for the father of six.

"When I am at home I have to wear gloves, but" he explains.

"I can't wear gloves and I get angry at one of my children. I can't spank him when I think he's the best."

And if he ever shook someone's hand, he says, he would burn them.

So far, Pablo says Suarez's abilities are increasing.

His team of researchers has measured 600 volts of power being generated through the man's hands.

"If he holds bared electrical wires in each of his hands, he can turn on a light bulb and even fry it," Dr. de Chiquito said.

"There's no way to predict how powerful this man's hands can be."

Dash of zinc makes you think!

Have you been forgetting things lately? Then a dash of zinc may be just what you need!

A report made in the United Kingdom suggests that people who suffer from memory problems may be lacking in zinc.

Researchers at Imperial College in London found that people who had memory problems had low levels of zinc in their blood.

They suggest that eating a little bit of zinc may help improve your memory.

Lean red meat, fish, beans, nuts and green leafy vegetables are a good source of both minerals.

Zinc and iron can also be purchased at drugstores.

EVIL WIFE PLOTS TO KILL HUSBAND — BUT HE STILL WANTS HER BACK!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

A scheming wife served prison time for killing her first husband with a bullet in the back and hired a hit man to rub out her current hubby — but he still loves her.

It will be years before Eugene Reedy can snuggle with his wife Bertha, who got a 32-year prison sentence for hiring a hit man to blow him away.

Big bad Bertha offered an undercover cop posing as the hit man $5,000 to shoot Eugene so she could collect $30,000 in life insurance. She gave him a gold watch as a down payment.

"I want him dead," she said on a hot dog tape. "He's done screwed up my whole life."

When the undercover cop asked if she wanted her husband run over by a car to make it look like an accident, cold-hearted Bertha replied, "Him hate you. I don't care. I just want him dead."

Bertha, 47, was convicted of solicitation for murder for hire by a jury in Rock Island, Ill., and won't be eligible for parole for 10 years.

But her faithful male says he'll wait as long as it takes.

"I don't think she should be punished," he said.

"She hasn't done me no harm. I'm not dead.

"She wasn't going to go through with it. She's no murderer."

But Judge Jay Hanson disagreed with him.

He described Bertha as a "danger to society."

"She killed her first husband and she tried to have her second one killed," the judge said.

"Let's just say it's in her nature to kill again."

Bertha was convicted of voluntary manslaughter in the shooting death of her first husband in 1977. She served five months in prison and was paroled in 1980.

Bertha was still in prison when she married Eugene in 1978.

The couple has three sons, ages 9 to 11.

"We love each other," said the lonesome hubby.

Fatty food hurts your sex life!

Scientists have come up with another good reason for folks to give up high-fat milkshakes and cheeseburgers: A high-fat diet can weaken a man's sex drive.

Researchers at the University of Utah found that men who ate fat-loaded diets had their male hormone levels plunged by 50 percent. "It may be hypothesized that after some time, a high-fat diet could weaken a man's sex drive," the researchers concluded.

Protect your body against aging!

YOU CAN'T TURN BACK THE CLOCK . . .

. . . but you sure can slow it down!

By JOE KANE
Special to The Weekly World News

You can't turn back the hands of time when it comes to aging — but you can slow them down, experts say.

All you have to do is follow these fascinating tips for protecting your body against the ravages of time. The helpful hints were collected by Frances Sheridan Goulart, a writer who specializes in health subjects.

● A suntan makes you look older quicker by causing wrinkles. Protect your skin from the sun with sunscreen so it won't get dry and leathery.

● Get enough sleep. Lack of rest reduces circulation and constricts capillaries causing loss of moisture and bags under the eyes.

● Take a stress break twice a day. It will help prevent stress damage to skin, including moles, warts, eczema, adult acne and psoriasis. It will also help ward off ulcers, colitis, high blood pressure, job burnout and lack of interest in sex — all stress-related conditions.

● Eat a fiber-rich diet. Fiber helps keep your weight and cholesterol levels down, prevents hernias, rhoids and varicose veins and regulates the bowels.

● Jump rope to keep in shape and shape up. It's great aerobic exercise and tones arms and leg muscles. It also builds up endurance and produces a glowing, rosy complexion.

● A two-mile walk every day also keeps you fighting form to ward off aging. The exercise prevents osteoporosis, a weakening of the bones which leads to fractures after age 30 in women and the ugly "dowager's hump" after 50.

● Laugh a lot. Studies show laughter prevents stress that leads to bad skin tone. What's more, a good mood will take 10 years off your age. Women who look happy live longer and enjoy better health, according to research.

● Give your hair a youth treatment. Feed it plenty of iron by making sure that egg yolks, meats, lentils and pulses are on your menu.

● Drink plenty of water. Too little water can give you wrinkled skin, kidney stones and urinary tract infections. Chug-a-lug at least six full glasses a day.

● Use makeup wisely to trim years off your looks. Don't use frosty makeup — it makes crevices and wrinkles look worse. Go dress light-colored mascara and dark-colored foundation. Hide deep-set wrinkles with a beige foundation.

● A fat-free diet keeps you young. Butter your bread only on weekends to reduce breast and colon cancers, heart attacks, strokes, high blood pressure and arteriosclerosis.

● Count calories. Keeping calorie intake low can take 10 years off your age, according to experts, and improve life expectancy by one-third. ▶

All hell breaks loose when girl gets her fanny pinched

Preacher's horseplay starts church riot!

A farcical church play ended in a riot when the front legs of a canvas horse — a 25-year-old woman — accused the rear legs — a 48-year-old preacher — of "making too free with his hands!"

"He touched my rear all over," Vivienne Mouraux told reporters in Arlon, Belgium. "I don't care if he's a preacher or not — that's not something you do to a respectable married lady."

The Joseph Reiger theatrical production's allegations fell on deaf ears.

He was joined along with Armand Mouraux, her 28-year-old husband, on charges of assault and inciting a riot.

"I don't know what of anything happened when the good reverend and Mrs. Mouraux were onstage together in the latter scenes," said Lt. Bruno Meerts of the police department in Arlon.

But then, the script in question didn't call for the preacher to grope the actress.

Vivienne said she was playing the part of Dorothy, a young woman who loses all her money and is forced to sell herself to survive.

Reiger was playing the part of Satan, who tempts her to do just that.

"He approached me and tried to stick his hand over my mouth," Vivienne said.

By this time all the people in the audience were on their feet trying to figure out what on Earth was going on.

"Armand Mouraux leaped up on the stage and started slugging the preacher.

"The preacher fought back by hitting him with a folding chair."

By the time police arrived to break up the fight at least 15 men and women were involved, said Lt. Meerts.

"I know most of those people and they're basically all pretty decent Christian folks," the officer commented.

"But that night they chose up sides and everyone was pretty darn mad."

There were some words between them that haven't been mentioned in church for a long time.

This cartoonist's depiction shows the riot that followed Rev. Reiger's punch-boom action during a play at the church.

Sicko joker dumps bloody head [redacted] his buddy's hands!

Prankster Mark Lemieyun played a grisly joke on a friend by plopping the severed head of a dead man in the unsuspecting victim's hands.

"It scared the living daylights out of him," Mark said, laughing. "He looked as though he'd seen a ghost."

Jokester Mark lured the quiet and shy co-worker into the morgue at a hospital where they worked in South Shields, England. "Just being there made him a bit uneasy," Mark said.

Terrified Jeffrey Hastings nearly fainted when Mark handed him the bloody head of divorcee Philip Donato, 45, who was decapitated in a railroad accident.

Hastings screamed bloody murder, dropped Donato's head and ran out of the morgue, down a hallway and completely out of the hospital.

"We haven't seen him nor hair of him since," said a hospital spokesman. "He looked like he was being chased by the devil himself."

Prankster Mark was picking the severed head up off the morgue floor when his supervisor walked up.

Mark, 28, a married father of three, has been fired from the $16,000 hospital porter's job he held for 10 years.

Hastings called in sick the day after the grisly prank.

14-year-old beauty's brutal murder shocks Massachusetts town

By JACK ALEXANDER
Daily News

A jealous teen slashed his gorgeous girlfriend's throat and dumped her lifeless body in a pond, cops said — because she was dating other boys.

Bloody high school freshman Jamie Fuller, 15, is being held on the bloody killing of Amy Carnevale, a 14-year-old blonde haired beauty. He denies the brutal crime.

"Her throat was slashed from ear to ear," said Assistant District Attorney Howard Whitehead. She was also stabbed in the back and although Amy of those wounds could have killed her."

The brutal slaying occurred as a couple behind a middle school in Beverly Mass. fell, having a violent argument over Amy dating other boys.

"We have three youths who saw Jamie and Amy go into the woods together. After the argument, Jamie walked out alone with a bloody knife in his hand and told the three boys, 'I did it,'" Whitehead told The Weekly World News.

Jamie and one of the three boys later returned to the woods, weighed the body with concrete blocks and tossed it into Shoe Pond, according to Whitehead.

Cops later arrested Michael Maillett, 19, and charged him with accessory after the fact.

"Police eventually questioned Maillett and the two other boys," Whitehead said. "We searched the pond and found the body.

"Our information is that they were arguing about her seeing other boys and apparently Jamie couldn't handle that," Whitehead added.

Tall [redacted] lands late-to-work employee [redacted] heap of trouble

A young man who was late to work tried to get out of his predicament with a lie — and told police he was kidnapped and dumped in a river by heartless thugs.

But the Dallas dad-to-be, 18, finally confessed he'd made it all up so that the boss wouldn't get angry because he was late.

The man told police he'd been abducted at gunpoint by two men who robbed him and then forced him to row off a river in a boat that while held by his kidnappers he had seen another hostage, a woman, who was tied up with fishing line.

Cops searched for the kidnappers and even issued a composite sketch of the woman, but Lieut. Charles Epperson said they doubted the story from the start.

A few days later the unidentified suspect confessed he'd made the whole incident

CAR NUT HANGS HIMSELF AFTER WRECKING HIS PRIDE AND JOY!

Mild-mannered Michael Bennett smashed his beloved car to smithereens and was so devastated he slunk away into the [redacted] — and hanged himself!

"That car was like a kid to Michael, he loved the thing that much," said grieving pal Geoffrey Leason.

"When he wrecked it, he was so upset he got down on his knees and kissed its smashed fender, trying to make it better.

"He had tears in his eyes and he kept sobbing, 'I'm sorry, car. I'm so sorry.'"

The mind-boggling turn of events began late one night as the bashful bachelor drove home from a pub in Driffield, England.

Weepy Michael, 28, lost control and crashed into a boulder alongside the road, totaling his shiny Citroen to bits.

"I was driving right behind him and ran up just seconds after the accident," distinguished Geoffrey later told reporters. "I was thankful to see he wasn't hurt, but I could tell his heart was broken.

"He'd worked so hard and put everything he earned into that car.

"He was standing there looking down at the awful mess he'd made, and out of the blue he said, 'I should be hanged for this.'"

Mortified Michael waved the crumpled car home with Geoffrey's help, then ran into his house crying.

"He came in and I could tell he was very distraught," recalled his heartsick brother.

"He stayed for a few minutes, then rushed out the door — and that was the last time I ever saw my boy."

The distraught gardener was later found hanging from a tree in his backyard. Around his neck was the same rope he'd used to tow his beloved car.

Hair dye makes groom go bald

. . . on his wedding day!

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Jaunty groom-to-be Darren Bowles tried to get all dolled up for his wedding day by dyeing his curly locks blond — and wound up as bald as Telly (Kojak) Savalas!

Embarrassed Darren, 25, was so shook up over his cue-ball noggin that he called off the wedding despite the frantic pleas of his eager sweetie Tracey Miles.

"I just couldn't go through with it looking so ridiculous," the crestfallen factory worker told reporters in Portslade, England.

"I couldn't face all our friends, and it wouldn't be fair to Tracey to walk down the aisle with somebody who looks like Friar Tuck."

Dapper Darren was determined to knock 'em dead when he tied the knot with his dream girl, so he treated himself to a do-it-yourself blond rinse the morning of his big day — and once's fallout. "We love each other, and I think it's sad to let something like this delay things," said the impatient lady.

"He could wear a toupee and all our friends and family would understand.

"I certainly wouldn't be embarrassed and he shouldn't be either."

But Darren says he's going to duck crowds until his noggin's no longer naked.

"I just hope Tracey will forgive me and we can eventually get married when my bald head doesn't shine in everybody's eyes," he said.

DO-IT-YOURSELF treatment caused Darren Bowles' hair to fall out — on the day of his wedding!

He's got muscles like Mr. Universe but he's the wimpiest guy in town!

THE

WOUF! Packer Lee has a macho body but he's just a wimp at heart. He would rather be at the keyboard of his accordion or computer than out with a pretty girl any day.

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Steroid-popping Packer Lee has the kind of body that would turn the Incredible Hulk green with envy. But despite his mighty muscles, prissy Packer couldn't get a date if his life depended on it — 'cause he's the world's biggest nerd!

"I've seen ladies checking out my body, but to tell you the truth, pretty girls scare the hell out of me," shuddered the cowardly computer whiz.

"And when they find out what a wimp I am, they just turn and run the other way.

"Girls want a man who'll take 'em out on the town, but I'd rather sit home and watch Lawrence Welk reruns on TV. I really would.

"So I guess it's true — I really am the world's only steroid nerd."

The St. Paul, Minn., mathematician began working out with weights 10 years ago after cruel college classmates nicknamed him Pencil. That was the last straw.

500-ft.-tall human skeleton found in North Carolina!

By MICHAEL TODD
Special to The NEWS

Archaeologists have found a 500-foot human skeleton in the mountains of North Carolina, all but proving that giants once walked the Earth — just like the Bible says!

"This is the archaeological find of the century," Dr. Robert Hayes told newsmen. "The skeleton is at least 50,000 years old and even more surprising than that, it's remarkably well-preserved.

Dr. Robert Hayes

"We initially thought that we had found the remains of an extremely large dinosaur," he continued. "But after further review we concluded that the skeleton is human in spite of its size."

Dr. Hayes and his research team claim to have found the skeleton while looking for Indian relics just east of Asheville, in Pitcher, N.C.

"We won't know exactly what we've got until we get some people in there and start digging," he said, refusing to reveal the exact location to avoid interference from media and tourists. But they did say that a 75-foot section of the right leg had been laid bare by wind and rain while the left leg, pelvis, ribs, neck and skull remain three to 10 feet underground.

"We won't know exactly what we've got until we get some people in there and start digging skeleton is intact," said Dr. Hayes.

"I'm not a particularly religious man," he added, "but our discovery certainly seems to support stories about giants that appear in the Bible."

The expert was apparently referring to passages in the book of Genesis that say giants roamed the world shortly after God created man.

It's not clear just how tall these giants were. But Dr.

it," recalled iron-pumping Parker, 30.

"I went to a gym for the first time in my life, but it smelled so sweaty in there I swore I'd never go back to the filthy place. So I bought a bunch of weights and started working out every day at home.

"Then a friend turned me on to steroids and my whole body pumped up almost overnight.

"Nobody called me Pencil Parker anymore, and I knew right then I was hooked on bodybuilding."

But the beefy geek can't his accretion even more.

"I know a young guy like me is supposed to be out chasing ladies and painting the town red," gutsy-waist Parker told a reporter.

"But to me, a good time means packing away on my PC, solving riddles that no one has ever solved before.

"And when I need a respite, I break out my xylophone and squeeze out a few tunes like my idol Mr. Welk.

"It's just like my sister says, I guess — all those muscles can't really change the man inside.
